SMELTING PROJECTS.

A Large and Enthusiastic Mass Meeting

Held Last Evening at the City Hall.

Two Definite Propositions Submitted and Discussed.

Committee Appointed to Act in the Matter.

The announcement in yesterday's issue of the GAZETTE that there was good reason to believe that two smelters would be built at Colorado City was ... at the mass meeting of citizens held under the auspices of the board of trade at the city hall last evening. The meeting was very largely attended ... many of whom were compelled to stand during the entire proceedings.

In the temporary absence of the first vice president of the board Mr A L Lawton the second vice president Dr J G Horn occupied the chair with Mr H C McCreery as secretary. After stating the object for which the meeting had been called the chairman asked what was the pleasure of the meeting.

Mr Reuben Berrey said that two smelting companies had submitted written propositions or agreements concerning the building of plants at Colorado City. He handed to the secretary a copy of the agreement entered into between Mr J R Holden and Mr Anthony Bott ... smelter. The terms of the agreement were similar to those stated in our issue of yesterday. In consideration of the land donated by Mr Bott Mr Holden agreed to build a smelter of six stacks, and to have the work well under way within four months from March 27th. He also reserved the right to consider the matter of the location of the smelter until that date. In addition to the property acquired he asked a bonus of $25,000 cash.

Mr Bott stated that twenty five per cent of the money raised would have to be paid when Mr Holden had done $ ... worth of work and the remainder of the sum would not fall due until the works were entirely completed.

Mr ... stated that he had recently been called upon by Mr H T Higgins of the American Mining and Smelting company who stated that the company would build a smelter of 100 tons capacity at Colorado City if ... proper inducements were offered to the company. The site had been already procured. Mr Howbert having held it in trust for the company. Mr Higgins stated that $ ... in cash was given to the company together with the free use of the water rights to be laid in Bott's ... work would be commenced upon the plant within thirty days. The smelter would have a daily capacity of about 100 tons and the company operating it would have a capital stock of $300,000. Mr Howbert stated that the proposition of the American company was entirely independent of that of Mr Holden and the two projects were in no sense related to each other. He thought that it would be a good thing if two smelters were secured as it would create a local ore market. At present Denver and Pueblo were the only ore markets of any importance in the state.

Mr Berrey moved that a committee of ... be appointed to take the matter of soliciting subscriptions in charge with power to act in the premises.

Mr B ... that the Colorado City board of trade had appointed a similar committee which had already received subscriptions amounting to over $7,000.

General Charles Adams stated that Manitou would do its share and that something over $1000 had been subscribed there yesterday as the result of an enthusiastic mass meeting held Wednesday evening.

Mr Howbert thought that all the committees should work in concert and in order to ascertain the sense of the meeting he would move an amendment to Mr Berrey's motion that the propositions of both companies should be accepted. Mr Berrey consented to incorporate the amendment in his motion which was carried.

The chair appointed the following persons on the committee: A L Lawton, A D Crume, B F Crowell, D B Fairley and I P Barlow.

Mr A L Lawton who had entered the room during the above proceedings stated that he considered this a critical period in the history of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou. He thought that a splendid opportunity had presented itself for determining the future growth of all three places.

The chairman then announced that subscriptions were ... and in a very short time $5,800 was voluntarily pledged.

Mr C ... having been called upon for a few remarks stated that he thought all present would be interested to know just what benefits ... the city from having smelters located in it. He called upon Mr D Brunton of Denver, editor of the Mining Stock and Rail who was present for information on the subject.

Mr Brunton said that he had devoted considerable time to observing the operations of smelters. He stated that the ... smelter would have a daily capacity of 200 tons ore and the American smelter a capacity of 100 tons. This would have to be hauled by the railroads. To treat these 100 tons ninety tons of limestone would be required, all of which would have to be quarried at Colorado City. In addition to this 100 tons of coke and charcoal would ... [illegible] probably be hauled over the Colorado Midland railway. Besides this from 3 to ... tons of cheap coal would be used in the operation of the smelters every day. This coal would in all probability be found in this county. From his personal observation he was able to state that the men who worked in smelters ... steady business and that between 400 and 500 houses would have to be built at Colorado City for the use of the employes of the two smelters. The operation of the plants would also require the use of a number of teams, etc. It was estimated that for every ton of ore treated $4 would have to be paid for labor. This would make the daily expenses of the smelting companies for labor alone about $1200. He saw no reason why Colorado Springs should not become a prominent commercial center. He considered that the three places Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou would be benefitted in a remarkable degree by the location of the smelters. The extension of the Rock Island road to this city would give the smelters a direct eastern outlet for their bullion and they would be on an equal footing with the smelters at Denver and Pueblo.

General Adams in a few remarks predicted a wonderful growth for this locality if the smelters were secured. After a few other remarks of a desultory character the meeting adjourned.

Fiftieth Congress

SENATE

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The resolution reported yesterday by Sherman from the committee on foreign relations requesting the president to negotiate a treaty with the emperor of China containing a provision that Chinese labor shall not enter the United States was taken up for consideration.

Sherman said that whatever differences of opinion there had been in the senate or country in regard to the question of Chinese immigration the time had come when he believed the general sentiment of the people was that the law on the subject should be fairly enforced and that the Chinese laborer should be excluded from this country because he would not adapt himself to its civilization. That feeling had been most strongly expressed before the committee on foreign relations by senators and representatives from the Pacific coast, and every member of the committee was of the opinion that the exclusion of Chinese laborers should be effectually carried out. The resolution was calculated to fortify the administration in its effort to obtain the desired treaty.

Stewart expressed his gratification at hearing from the senator from Alabama (Morgan) that the state department was already engaged in the negotiation of a treaty with China. He had no doubt that the expression of the opinion of the senate in the adoption of the resolution would give the Chinese government to understand the determination of this country to exclude Chinese laborers altogether. He was also exceedingly gratified to find that the country now understood the Chinese question and that the opposition to them was not a matter of passion or prejudice on the part of the people of the Pacific coast.

Mitchell regarded the resolution as a step in the right direction, but as a very feeble step. He said that in addition to a treaty with China there should be treaties to the same effect with Great Britain, France and Mexico.

The resolution was adopted.

The pension bill was taken up, the pending discussion being on an amendment offered yesterday by Wilson of Iowa to add the words "from the infirmities of age."

Beck said $50,000,000 would not half cover the amount of expenditure if the amendment was adopted. The bill would settle the surplus for all time to come. The debate then drifted into a discussion of the tariff during which Beck referred to the demonetization of silver and attacked Sherman for it. He suggested (reverting to the pension question) that as the wealth of the country was protected by the exertion of the soldiers senators on the other side many of whom were millionaires should meet the expenditures for pensions by an income tax.

Plumb said the senator from Kentucky was not a free trader except for revenue neither was any other senator on the democratic side who had anything to make by being a protectionist. Senators on the other side, he said, ill concealed their feelings of regret that it was not soldiers of the confederate army that were to be pensioned under the pending measure.

Without a vote on the amendment the senate adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE

Morrow of California from the committee on foreign affairs reported a resolution calling on the president for information as to what steps have been taken in the direction of treaty stipulations or otherwise to prevent continued immigration of Chinese laborers into the United States notwithstanding proscription of the treaty of November 17 1880, between the United States and China, and laws passed in pursuance thereof. Adopted.

Belmont of New York called up the joint resolution authorizing the president to arrange a conference to be held in Washington in ... for the purpose of promoting arbitration and encouraging reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and the republics of Central and South America and the empire of Brazil. An amendment was adopted making one of the questions to be considered by conference means of direct communication between the United States and other countries. The resolution was agreed to. Adjourned.

Republican Congressional Committee

WASHINGTON, March 1. The following republican congressional committee was chosen by the joint caucus to-night: John B McDuffie Alabama, James McKenny California, G G Symes Colorado, ... Russell Connecticut, Senator C B Farwell Illinois, George W Steele Indiana, F B Connor Iowa, Thos Ryan Kansas, C A Boutelle Maine, ... Kentucky and Virginia were authorized to select one member each and report his name to the secretary of the joint caucus.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Mills' Bill Submitted to the Ways and Means Committee.

A Large Number of Additions Made to the Free List.

The Aggregate Reduction Estimated at Fifty-five Millions.

A Great Proportion Borne by Wool and Woolen Goods.

The Proposed Tariff Bill

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The chairman of the ways and means committee to-day submitted to the full committee the tariff bill upon which democratic members have been at work for several months. The free list section is to take effect July 1st 1888. Among the additions to the list of articles which may be imported free of duty are the following:

Timber—Various kinds of timber or lumber whether hewn or sawed, also rough wagon and shipping material and all kinds of wood not specified in the bill provided the articles mentioned are not subject to duty in the country whence imported, otherwise present duties will be levied. Salt with the same restrictions as timber, flax, hemp and various vegetable fibres, burlaps not exceeding sixty inches wide, bagging, tin plates, terne plates and taggers tin, beeswax, gelatine and similar preparations, glycerine and glues, phosphorous, soap and soap stocks, tanning bark, oils compressed from seeds, petroleum and its products, mineral waters and imitation cement, tar and its products, turpentine, preparations known as essential, expressed, distilled and rendered oils, alkaline alkaloids and various chemical compounds, bulbs, fruits, nuts, seeds, etc., crude earths, clays and minerals, opium crude, containing over nine per cent morphia for medicinal purposes, iron, steel hoops, needles, copper ores, regulus and old copper, nickel ore and crude antimony, quicksilver, cromate of iron, or cromic ore, crude mineral and metals unwrought and not especially enumerated or provided for, brick, vegetables, meats, beans, peas, etc, pulp for paper, Bibles, books and pamphlets printed in other languages than English and books and pamphlets and all publications of foreign governments and publications of foreign societies, historical or scientific, printed for gratuitous distribution, paintings in oil or water colors and statuary not otherwise provided for, stone unmanufactured or undressed, hair, hatters' fur, unstained rags, rattans and reeds unmanufactured.

The bill provides for admitting free of duty after July 1st all wools, hair of the alpaca, goat and other like animals, wools on the skin, woolen rags, shoddy, mungo waste and flocks, and after October 1st, 1888, it provides among other things for forty per cent duty on woolen and worsted cloth, shawls, and all manufacturers' wool not specially enumerated, and on flannels, blankets, knit goods, women's and children's dress goods composed in part of wool.

The entire wool schedule not on the free list is subjected to thirty per cent duty. All grades of sugar are reduced by an amount varying from one-fifth to one-fourth of the present duties. The reductions on china and glassware range up to 13 per cent. Cotton yarn is reduced to thirty five and forty per cent, bleached linens to twenty five per cent, other yarns twenty five per cent, cotton cloth forty per cent, ready made clothing and cloaks forty five, webbings fifty, carpets thirty, paper and its manufactures are generally reduced, carriages thirty per cent, watches twenty five.

The new bill proposes to fix the duty on pig iron at $6 per ton, on iron or steel railway bars weighing more than 25 pounds to the yard and slabs or billets of steel $11 per ton. On iron or steel T rails weighing not over 25 pounds to the yard $14 per ton and on iron or steel flat rails punched $15 per ton.

All leaf tobacco unmanufactured is fixed at thirty five cents per pound and the present distinction between Sumatra and ordinary wrapping tobacco is abolished.

The recommendations made as to protests, appeals and suits by Secretary Manning in a special report to congress two years ago are all adopted. Penalties are made more stringent for bribing or feeing inspectors of customs or for any irregularities in the inspection of baggage. The government is authorized to bring suit for the value of merchandise fraudulently imported after such merchandise has passed into the hands of the inspectors. Other provisions are all of a minor character.

Estimates of reductions in revenue effected by the bill have not been completed in detail, but the aggregate according to the best information in the hands of the committee is fixed at $55,000,000. This total includes about 21½ millions on account of the free list, 17½ millions on account of woolen goods, $1,600,000 for china and glassware, three quarters of a million dollars in the chemical schedule, something less than half a million dollars on cotton, one and a half million dollars on flax, hemp and jute and sugar about eleven million dollars. There are no internal revenue changes proposed by the bill. This subject was purposely left for lack of time to the consideration of the full committee.

The administrative provisions constitute the most voluminous part of the bill and embrace provisions compiled by Hewitt in the 49th congress and incorporated in the Morrison bill. Hewitt's provisions abolishing the office of merchant appraiser and providing new methods of appraisement are omitted. The entire system of damage allowance during ... goods injured during transportation is abolished. The period for which imported merchandise can be kept in bonded warehouses is extended from one to three years. Duties on boxes, cartoons and other inside coverings of merchandise which passes into the hands of the consumers are revised, also duties on packing charges. What is known as the similitude clause of the tariff is re-enacted with such wording as to make clear when enumerated articles can be classified as assimilating to enumerated articles. Importers' declarations are substituted for importers' oaths in all customs matters and importers are authorized to make declarations before notaries instead of at custom houses.

The boom has now commenced, and from present indications will increase in volume. Some people imagine that a "boom" simply means an unusual activity in one particular branch of trade, namely "real estate." This is not so. The word "boom" is a general one and refers to activity in all lines of business. This is particularly true in the present instance. Our business men feel its influence and report a general activity in their respective branches of trade. In clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods there is a steady demand for well-made goods at low prices. I am able to meet this demand. I have recently received some very nice things in the clothing line. In fact I receive something new every week, and I am kept constantly busy in arranging the new goods as they come in. I have some very attractive styles of neckwear which are entirely new, and can be seen at no other place in the city. But you must visit my store and see for yourself. dw-a-13

A large audience witnessed Lotta's presentation of "The Little Detective" at the opera house last evening. Judging by the applause the performance was a great success. Lotta did some very clever specialty work and was well supported.

By an announcement in another column it will be seen that the Pike's Peak Dry Goods Emporium has changed hands. Mr. Edward Ferris has sold his stock and business to H. W. Gibson & Co. He will continue with the firm in the capacity of general managing salesman.

At the last meeting of the board of trade the committee on railroads was directed to correspond with the officials of the Denver, Texas & Gulf railroad regarding the possibility of changing the main line of the road, so that it would pass through the city. Last evening a meeting of the committee was held at which a letter was read from ex-Governor Evans, the president of the road. That official stated that the railroad company had as yet taken no action in the matter.

Mr. R. E. Graves, for thirty years engaged in the banking business in Iowa, has purchased a small interest in the stock of the First National bank of Colorado Springs, at quite a large premium and will assist in its management. Mr. Hayes' continued ill health rendering it impossible for him to attend to the details of the business, and President Howbert's other engagements taking most of his time, the directors on the suggestion of Mr. Howbert have decided to make Mr. Graves president and he will assume the duties of the office at an early date. Mr. Graves takes the place of Dr. N. S. Culver in the board, with no other changes, and the business of the bank, which is in the most prosperous condition, will as heretofore, receive the daily attention of the present directors, and the capital stock will be increased to $100,000, the general business of the city and the growing business of the bank seeming to justify it. In 1885 Mr. Graves was selected to represent the 600 banks of Iowa as vice president of the American Bankers' association. For thirty-seven years he has been engaged in banking, and is well and favorably known to many of the prominent business men of this city. The GAZETTE, ever mindful of the interests of the community, congratulates the bank on the acquisition to its working force, and bespeaks for Mr. Graves the hearty welcome of the business community. The leading bank of the northwest, the First National Bank, of Chicago, speaks of Mr. Graves as "an honor to the banking fraternity, and the community wherever he may locate."

His collection of ... was deposited in the rooms of the Royal Geographical society and excited a good deal of attention, drawing visits from ... persons unknown as one who had spent so much time in company with the chimpanzee and the gorilla. He had heard of the Duke of Argyll and of Gladstone, possibly the Bishop of Oxford, but did not know that this bishop has long been accustomed to sign himself "Oxon." The three ... to Du Chaillu on the same day ... complications which ensued are so well told in London "Court Pump" that its story thereof is here "lifted" bodily

Mr Gladstone worded his letter in the usual way inviting M du Chaillu to breakfast. The Duke of Argyll wrote substantially as follows

The Duke of Argyll presents his compliments to M du Chaillu and begs to inform him that he will ... at 3:30 on Thursday next.

The bishop wrote

DEAR SIR—Will you ... the favor of lunch ... Yours truly OXON

M du Chaillu answered Mr Gladstone's invitation accepting it. But, not being familiar with ducal and episcopal ways, he did not understand the second and third notes. The former, it seems to have rather resented, for he replied as follows

M du Chaillu presents his compliments to the Duke of Argyll, and begs to inform him that his collection at the rooms of the Royal Geographical society is open to the public at large. Should his grace present himself he will doubtless be ... attendance.

The bishop's note was, however, a hopeless poser. M du Chaillu had never heard of any ... man of the name of Oxon. Be a happy thought struck him. Before answering the note he would reconnoiter the house that the writer dated from. So he proceeded to 55 ... street, and, perceiving in the dingy window of the first floor evidence that a tailor practiced his art there, made no further inquiry. It never occurred to him as possible that a public personage might have rooms above a tailor's shop in a good locality. He did not even pause to compare the tailor's name with the signature at the bottom of the note. The whole thing was clear. Oxon was a "vulgar tradesman" who, presuming on his wealth, had written him. Such a fellow deserved no answer and none was given. M du Chaillu duly appeared at Mr Gladstone's house on the morning mentioned in the note of invitation, and there met a distinguished company. He mentioned to his host that he had received a note from the Duke of Argyll and described its tenor. Mr Gladstone, then in the same political boat with the Duke of Argyll, begged M du Chaillu to excuse any appearance of "superiority" in his grace's epistolary style, on the ground that he had not received a public school education. Among the company whom M du Chaillu met at Mr Gladstone's was the bishop of Oxford, and he found him the most urbane of gentlemen and most delightful of companions. As they were leaving ... he bishop said

My dear sir, why did you not come to lunch with me the other day? Lord Elgin was there and some other men I think you would have liked to meet. From your not answering my note I made sure you were coming.

THREE HEROIC GIRLS.

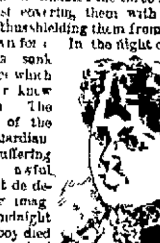

THE TALE OF THEIR BRAVERY TOLD IN DETAIL

How Miss Royce Shielded Her Pupils from the Blizzard and Suffered for Her Heroic Act—Miss Freeman's Presence of Mind—Miss Shattuck's Death.

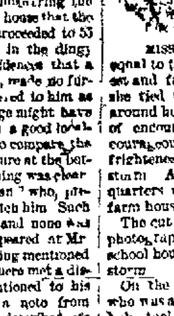

THE bravery of the three Nebraska school teachers, Miss Freeman, Miss Royce and Miss Shattuck, in the terrible blizzard that passed through Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska in January last is the subject of much newspaper writing, but a complete and correct recital of their self sacrificing heroism has not yet been told

Miss Lolo M Royce was teaching a school near Plainfield, Neb., on the day of the great storm. At noon six of the children went home, and the blizzard coming up, they did not return. Miss Royce and the three remaining pupils stayed at the school until 3 o'clock and the fuel giving out the young lady determined to take her little ones to her boarding house, situated only fifteen rods from the school house. They started out, but in the fury of the storm wandered out of their way and became lost. The storm increased, and after hours of endeavor the brave teacher sank down in the snow and gathered her little brood about her. Darkness came on. Weary and frightened the little ones began to cry. Sinking to the snow covered ground, they sobbed themselves into a restless sleep. The brave young girl realized that this exposure would result in death to her little flock, and, stretching herself at full length upon the snow, and to the north she huddled the three little ones to her breast covering them with her own cloak and thus shielding them from the wind with her own form. In the night one of the little boys sank into a silence which the teacher knew was death. The feelings of the young guardian herself suffering with the awful cold cannot be described nor imagined. At midnight the other boy died without a word of warning, and, with an effort the brave woman gathered little Hattie Rosburg, aged 7, in her ... The child became delirious, and between her sobs came the pitiful appeal "Oh, I'm so cold, mamma, please cover me up," an appeal which rent the heart of the faithful teacher. At daylight the little girl died. At 8 o'clock in the morning Miss Royce ... shelter, both feet and her left arm and ... being frozen. Both of her feet have since been amputated at the ankles. It is believed her arm will be saved. Though ... ful in her efforts to save the lives of her little charges, Lois Royce did the best she could, and the angels could do no more.

MISS ROYCE.

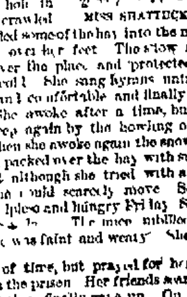

Another heroine is Miss Minnie Freeman, who was teaching a school in the Mira Valley district, near Ord, Neb. The pupils were wrought up to the highest pitch of excitement by the fury of the storm. In the ... of the teacher's ... that all would be well, a terrible gust of wind struck the building, the windows rattled, the house shook and the door of the structure was torn from its hinges. It was then the young teacher realized the necessity of preparing for emergencies. With an exhibition of rare judgment she gathered her little brood together, and, securing a coil of strong twine, began with the ... and tied the children together by the arms and bodies, three abreast. This completed, she huddled her charges around the stove. This was scarcely accomplished when the blizzard struck the building and carried away in the twinkling of an eye the entire roof of the structure, leaving the frightened little ones exposed to the ... The time for prompt action had arrived, but the plucky teacher was equal to the emergency. Taking the youngest and frailest of her charges in her arms, she tied the remaining end of the twine around her own body, and with all the words of encouragement she could muster, the courageous young woman started with the frightened little ones out into the fury of the storm. After a wearisome journey of three quarters of a mile, the little band reached a farm house and warmth and shelter

MISS FREEMAN

The cut at the head of this article is from a photograph taken of Miss Freeman, her school house and her pupils, since the great storm

On the same night Miss Etta Shattuck, who was a teacher near Emmet, Holt county, Neb., took refuge in a hay stack, and was exposed to the elements for a period of seventy-eight hours. From Thursday night to the following Sunday evening she was without food or drink. Unlike the Misses Royce and Freeman she was not burdened with the care of little ones, as all of her pupils were sent to their homes in time to avoid the effects of the storm. To the children in her care she discharged every obligation. After each had been sent home she started out herself. She wandered around on the prairie until she stumbled against a hay stack, and, feeling it was her only chance of safety, she dug a hole in the stack, crawled in, and pulled some of the hay into the mouth of the hole over her feet. The snow sifted into and over the place and protected her from the cold. She sang hymns until she felt warm and comfortable and finally went to sleep. She awoke after a time, but was lulled to sleep again by the howling of the storm. When she awoke again the snow had drifted and packed over the hay with such a weight that although she tried with all her strength she could scarcely move. So she lay there helpless and hungry Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The mice nibbled her hands. She was faint and weary. She lost all account of time, but prayed for her delivery from the prison. Her friends searched for her, but they finally gave up. On Sunday a farmer drove to the hay stack to get some hay. He noticed the hay had been disturbed and reaching into the hole, caught hold of the lady's overshoe. He quickly liberated her from her living grave. It was found that both of her lower limbs were frozen and both feet had to be amputated. It was at first thought she would survive, but death relieved her sufferings early in the present month, and the poor girl's remains were laid at rest at Seward, Neb.

MISS SHATTUCK.

The heroism and the sufferings of these brave and noble girls have called out the deepest sympathy and heartfelt recognition from the good people of Nebraska. The Omaha Daily Bee, on learning of the devotion of these teachers to their pupils, immediately started a testimonial fund. When the amputation of Miss Shattuck's feet be came necessary, and it was found she would have no way in which to earn a livelihood, the Heroine fund rapidly ... and at the date of the noble girl's death $3,730.01 had been raised for her benefit. Miss Shattuck's father is a veteran of the late war, and by ... wounds ... incapacitated for labor. The family was dependent upon the earnings of their brave daughter and the above named amount, together with about $1,000 more from The Bee's special fund is to be paid to the parents of the unfortunate girl. A prominent jeweler of San Francisco sent a handsome gold watch to Miss Freeman. The chain is wrought in semblance of a rope as a reminder of the means by which she led precious lives from peril to safety. Already the fund for Miss Royce has reached $3,000 and it is hoped this amount may be increased to such a figure that the interest will provide for her during the rest of her life.

Clipping the Churches

Clipping the churches is a curious old custom formerly practiced in Birmingham, England

This ceremony was performed amid crowds of people and shouts of joy by the children of the different charity schools, who at a certain hour flocked together for the purpose. The first comers placed themselves hand in hand with their backs against the church, and were joined by their companions who gradually increased in number, till at last the chain was of sufficient length completely to surround the sacred edifice

As soon as the hand of the last of the train had grasped that of the first, the party broke up and walked in procession to the other church (for in those days Birmingham boasted but of two), where the ceremony was repeated

One of Time's Revenges

It is noticed as a curious coincidence that a house built with money earned by vilifying Americans should be run as an American boarding house. This house is the Villa Trollope in Florence, which was built by Mrs. Trollope, the ... of Anthony and T Adolphus, from the sale of her book, "The Domestic Manners of the Americans." But the whirligig of time has brought its revenge, and the Americans who visit Florence now sit with their feet out of the front windows of her own house, or nurse their babies on the doorstep. At least that is what they do at home if we are to believe Mrs Trollope, and why should they not do the same abroad? Chicago Herald.

Manager of the Gazette.

The strike of the engineers on the Chicago Burlington and Quincy and leased lines has been the event of the present week. The fact that this is the first strike of the Brotherhood of Engineers in the past ten years has undoubtedly created a great prejudice in favor of the brotherhood. Grand Master Arthur has been conservative in all his acts and has not sympathized with the unreasonable strikes in the last two years on the railroads by the Knights of Labor. It is undeniably for this reason that there is a good deal of public sympathy for the strikers. The Denver papers seem to desire to express this public sentiment rather than look at both sides. In none of them has there been any discussion of the real point at issue on its merits, but all begin with the supposition that the railroad is wrong and the strikers are right.

If we were the judge of this matter without any examination into the facts the Burlington is entitled to some consideration as well as the strikers. While other roads about it have had more or less trouble with their operatives in the past ten or twelve years, the Burlington has had no trouble whatever. There has been no trouble because the Burlington has been fair in the treatment of its operatives. Those who have traveled in the past few years between Colorado and the east have noticed the difference in the conduct of the various employes of the Burlington and of the employes of other lines. The employ of the Burlington have been distinguished above the employes of any other trunk line for the loyal interest which they have taken in everything that concerned the prosperity of the road. They have not performed their duties in a perfunctory manner, but have actually treated the passengers and every one doing business with the Burlington as though they had some interest in the road and were not simply drawing wages. This relation between the road's authorities and the employes is compli[illegible] voluntary to both and should create a prejudice in favor of the railroad as well as the employes. Looking at the question however, on its merits, there is a question of the greatest importance involved. The Burlington road insists that it is willing to pay the operatives as much as is paid by other roads. This is all Chief Arthur says he wishes. The real difference exists in the method of fixing the wages. The present plan of the Burlington is to take its engineers as far as possible from the firemen. For the first year, their wages are fixed somewhat above the wages of a fireman. The second year the wages are still further increased and in the third year, they are given the full pay of engineers. The real bone of contention is over this classification. Chief Arthur insists that all engineers shall be paid on the same basis and be paid as much a mile for running the trains. He says that the Burlington has no right to put any man in charge of an engine who is not competent and that if he is competent, he should receive the same wages that other engineers are receiving. This is a very specious argument but does not appeal to the experience or common sense of every day life. Young doctors begin to practice with credentials from the medical schools and from the state that they are competent. On their skill depends in some degree the lives of their patients. Yet we presume that no one would hold that a physician is as valuable to his patients at the beginning of his practice as he is after ten years of experience. Experience in any position of responsibility or importance is of value and ought to be considered in the adjustment of any wages. These engineers when they first begin to run engines are not as valuable as they are after an experience of a few years. They might have an engine or we could have no more engineers. The Brotherhood says [illegible] exalts the responsibility which the engineer has and the skill with which he performs his labor. It is because this responsibility and this skill that experience increases the value of an engineer. Experience does not increase the value of the railroad [illegible] the does whatever skill is involved. The engineer who runs the passenger train twenty miles an hour on the branch road where he is not likely to meet other trains and is not encumbered with complicated train rules [illegible] other runs [illegible] the [illegible] position of responsibility and [illegible] titled to the same pay as the engineer of the passenger train on the main line [illegible] hour on a track [illegible] with trains [illegible] other calling in life [illegible] is graded according to the responsibility and skill. There is no reason why the railroad should [illegible] recognize the same principle in determining the wages of its employes that every business man [illegible] would do in determining the wages of his employes.

One of the most vicious tendencies of the labor organizations of the present day is the arbitrary leveling of all wages. Employers are not permitted to regulate the pay according to the skill, experience and faithfulness of the employe. Nothing could be worse than this for either employer or employe. There is no object in doing one's work better, because the pay is the same whatever your skill, industry or experience may be. This system takes away all ambition. The employer cannot expect the best results, because the employed have no particular reason for putting forth their best efforts. It would be just as reasonable to pass a law in this state directing that all female teachers receive exactly the same pay and all male teachers receive the same pay, or that all grocery clerks and all dry goods clerks receive the same pay. Such a law would be regarded as exceedingly unjust. The Burlington adopted this classification many years ago. It is distinguished among western roads as the railroad which has recognized the ability and faithfulness of its employes in promotions. It seldom takes even its highest officers from other corporations but fills its vacancies by promotions within its own organization. The system has been a good one for the road because it has excited the ambition of the employes. It has also been a good thing for the employes because they could either see the better position ahead if they were worthy of it or else saw that their industry and faithfulness in the position that they occupied would be recognized by an increase of wages. If as it now appears the real fight is on this issue we hope that the railroad won't yield. By not yielding they are doing the greatest possible kindness to the employes.

POWER OF NIAGARA FALLS

Some of the Queer Ways They Have Sought to Use It.

[Special Correspondence.]

NIAGARA FALLS Feb 20. Since the inventive Yank at first looked on the natural wonder here, many thousands of men who pride themselves on being more practical than sentimental have viewed the falls with this thought:

"What a magnificent water power!"

Yet, the power remains almost untouched. The cataract is entirely too large to be controlled by any cheap and simple process.

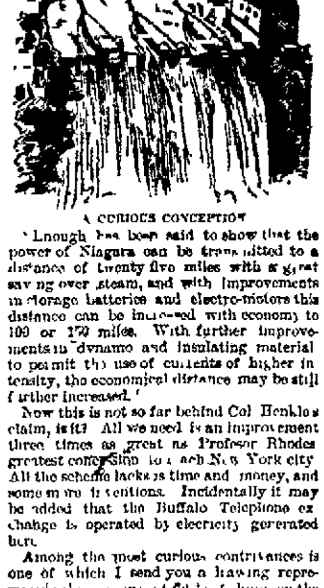

But the possibilities of electric motors and the transmission of power to [illegible] have started up a host of projectors, and many a man has asked in vague, [illegible] wonder why this immense force could not be "carried" to New York, Buffalo and other cities! Most enthusiastic among the projectors has been Col. Leonard Henkle, of Rochester, N. Y., who has acquired some fame as an inventor. His scheme was a big one. He secured a contract for the use of 2,000,000 horse power and [illegible] company with a capital of $[illegible],000,000 or more, a mammoth building of cut stone was to be erected at the brink of the American fall, and in this were to be placed hydraulic engines of 200,000 horse power, which were thought sufficient to utilize the 2,000,000 horse power [illegible] by [illegible] the falls and rapids. He proposed two [illegible] twenty-four [illegible] 1,000 [illegible] miles of [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Nevertheless Col. Henkle [illegible] to [illegible] a contract to pay $1,000 [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

In the meantime [illegible] hydraulic canal [illegible] for the village and the [illegible] in Prospect park. Of course the first city likely to utilize the power [illegible] is Buffalo, and it may be said with certainty that the [illegible] must be [illegible] before any serious attempt will be [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] power within [illegible] [illegible]. Prof. Rhodes has made a careful estimate to this effect. "The length of circuit required between the falls and Buffalo is fifty miles. Experience has shown that forty to sixty lights can be run on one circuit with an electro-motive force of 2,000 to 3,000 volts, but a greater number requires a current of such intensity as to produce danger of burning the insulation in the dynamos as at present constructed. There is no doubt that dynamos can be improved so as to [illegible] 100 arc lights in the circuit." After giving figures on cost of construction and operation the professor gives this very encouraging conclusion:

A CURIOUS CONCEPTION

"Enough has been said to show that the power of Niagara can be transmitted to a distance of twenty-five miles with a great saving over steam, and with improvements in storage batteries and electro-motors this distance can be increased with economy to 100 or 150 miles. With further improvements in dynamo and insulating material to permit the use of currents of higher intensity, the economical distance may be still further increased."

Now this is not so far behind Col. Henkle's claim, is it? All we need is an improvement three times as great as Professor Rhodes' greatest conception to reach New York city. All the scheme lacks is time and money, and some minor inventions. Incidentally it may be added that the Buffalo Telephone exchange is operated by electricity generated here.

Among the most curious contrivances is one of which I send you a drawing representing it as the scene of [illegible] on the very edge of the falls with "[illegible]" attached. [illegible] genius [illegible] a curiously complicated plan for buckets or paddles on an endless chain to offer no resistance coming up, but catch all the force going down.

In conclusion it may be said that while the great deep cut tunnel lately described, will utilize immense water power to be used here, the problem of transmitting the power to Buffalo or elsewhere is not yet solved. Of course no man who appreciates the possibilities of science will say that it is impracticable or even improbable and the projectors [illegible] to be [illegible] [illegible]

All things are possible with electricity.
